The new fairy burleaque, Greenbakins, is drawing largely. It is cleverly put together, heing arranged on as to bring into broad relief the talent of all the different members of the company. The wit is, of course, broad, and the satire at times trenchant, but they are all the more effective. If to provoke a hearty laugh and send people away content be the sin sud end of such pleoes, then it can be said to fulfil its objects. There are few things in the shape success. Of the management of the securery is everything that taste and a profuse expenditure could produce, and the last tableau is quite a triumph of artistic skill. Ferrollemand, attractive as it was, is thrown into the shade by this fresh effort of the management.
